The Earth’s moon is the second-densest satellite in the Solar System. Earth is the densest planet in the Solar System. As such we utilize the density of both celestial bodies to imbue our One Time Spaceman, Moon Duck with density so dense, that even the densest dullard can revel in the massive awesomeness of this stellar extract from the stars.

Heavy aromatics of roasted coffee, soy-crust-ed-pork-roast, and currant jelly explode from the glass like a sun going supernova. This wine is thicker than a neutron star and the The Duck delivers whopping flavors of black-currant and blueberry-jam flavors with subtle hints of chai, purple flowers, and a smidgeon of toffee.

Polished tannins and ample acidity provide balance and slurping goodness that hangs on the palate like a dollop of clover honey on a cold spoon.
